

School Day Launching New US Districts and Schools Together with Eduscape

December 18, 2020

School Day is expanding its presence in the US together with Eduscape, its North American distribution partner. School Day's award-winning service will be adopted by several K-12 districts and schools in early 2021.

Student wellbeing and social-emotional learning (SEL) was a priority even prior to COVID-19. Now, with the rapid transition to remote and hybrid learning, SEL has become a top agenda topic for many districts. New schools and districts starting with School Day include Ursuline Academy in New Orleans, Palmer School District in Massachusetts, and the Diocese of Agana in Guam.

"We are excited to deploy School Day to our students and teachers immediately after the holiday break; it is the only tool we have seen that can provide useful data on the wellbeing of our students by giving them a voice while securing their privacy.", stated Tracy Bonday, Principal of Ursuline, founded in 1727 and the oldest Catholic school and all-girls K-12 in the United States.

According to CASEL, SEL offers a powerful means to support one another – children and adults – during this challenging time. Now, more than ever, we understand how important it is to demonstrate empathy and resilience, build relationships across distance, and call upon our collective resolve to strengthen our schools and our communities.

School Day VP Sampo Lokki says: "We have systematically built the awareness of our unique service together with Eduscape this year. I'm very happy about the latest developments, and especially that more and more districts are trusting School Day as part of their SEL initiatives.

Creating our first local success stories has proven to be a very successful strategy. Year 2021 is looking very exciting for us together."

No one was ready for this upheaval, says Christina Cipriano, Director of Research at the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence \(YCEI\). "It's a daunting reality, no question, but the worst thing we can do for our teachers, students, and families is de-prioritize SEL during the pandemic," she explains. "It is next-to-impossible to expect teaching and learning to occur in a crisis without attending to our emotions."

Alex Urrea, Eduscape's Founder and CEO adds, "As a leading IE company (Innovation in Education), the team at Eduscape has evaluated and represented world-class educational resources to advance teaching and learning. School Day is perhaps the most important tool we have ever supported due to its data-driven approach to social-emotional learning strategies and giving students a recurring voice in their wellbeing needs."

More information:

Sampo Lokki, VP Sales and Partnerships

School Day Helsinki Ltd.

sampo.lokki@schoolday.com

Alex Urrea, Managing Partner and Director

Eduscape

info@eduscape.com

tel. +1-800-781-7976

About School Day

School Day is an EdTech company founded in Finland in 2017. Its solution collects and analyses real time student survey data to help schools improve their wellbeing. Leaders at school and district level use these critical data insights to address students' barriers to learning and to inform whole-school decision making.

About Eduscape

Eduscape is a leading K-12 professional learning organization. The organization's expertise includes development of blended learning programs for classroom productivity applications, SEL, CTE and STEM Education. Eduscape is a Google for Education National Training Partner, a leading Microsoft Global Training Partner and the only privately held authorized provider of the ISTE Educator Certification.

